CHAPTER IV New Resolves. --With the departure of Warren Hastings, it was determined to do better. The conscience of the country was touched. But, as Mr. Ludlow points out in British India, we were not ready to give back to the Mogul Emperor the provinces we had agreed to keep for him, but which we had sold; we were not ready to give the Rohillas their independence, nor to return to the Subahdar the provinces which we had fleeced from him; nor to restore to the Begums their treasure, nor to give back Benares to its Rajah. How shamefully late British action came, can be understood from a letter written by the Court of Directors to Clive: We have the strongest sense of the deplorable state to which our affairs were on the point of being reached, from the corruption and rapacity of our servants, and the universal depravity of manners throughout the settlement. The general relaxation of all discipline and obedience, both military and civil, was hastily tending to a dissolution of all government. Our letter to the Select Committee expresses our sentiments of what has been obtained by way of donations; and to that we must add, that we think the vast fortunes acquired in the inland trade have been obtained by a scene of the most tyrannic and oppressive conduct that was ever known in any age or country. Extent Of The Companys Possessions. --For a moment we must look at the...
