The directors were instructed by vote of the society to canvass the subject and ascertain if there was a sentiment in favor of the observance of the day. The proposition met with a hearty response, and the town unanimously voted at the April town meeting, under Art. 67 in the town warrant, to observe the occasion under the auspices of Old Home Day. An appropriation of three hundred dollars was made to meet the necessary expenses. A joint committee of the town and the Dover Historical Society arranged for the celebration and carried out an interesting programme, the entire expense of which was kept within the appropriation. A more perfect summer day for the celebration could not have been desired, fair skies and gentle breezes prevailed. It was estimated that at least a thousand persons were in attendance during the day. All public buildings and private residences in the center of the town were tastefully adorned. The interior of the meeting house was beautifully decorated with crimson ramblers and horse brier, while the town hall was dressed in our national colors. An arch was erected over the central path leading across the Common, which bore a Welcome for all. Derby s Natick Band discoursed appropriate music throughout the day, from a band stand, which had been erected on the Common. Able committees on invitations,...
